

Critical Thinking

Tuesday, January 2, 9, 16, 23, 30 • 10:30am

How to deal with polarization and the deluge of today's information with Steve Pollack

Today's issues make clear thinking, rational judgements, identifying rhetoric and analyzing issues difficult, at best. Critical thinking helps to identify reliable sources of information, and help self-awareness of one's own biases. Understanding how to ask relevant questions about information will help to identify if information is current, relevant, has authority, accuracy and purpose. This program will investigate principles of critical thinking and apply them with ground rules to issues and problems that concern us today.
